You have just crossed this bridge, and are now officially a boy scout.

You drop down on the floor, imagining an alternative audience.

You are in a hall - perhaps the basement of a church... some kind of community center.

When you reach the top, you look out and realize that you are on an island. There is roughly a half mile of birch in every direction and water on the horizon. You can see 🐦 in other trees around the island. You assume that the sun is directly above you, but the sky is quite cloudy.
